This course offers the necessary knowledge and techniques to form you professionally as a complementary VET practitioner for small animals, it is also addressed to all those people who like animals and want to become a professional in complementary VET therapies for pets and small animals- and for those who want to help their own animals at home.

The content and structure of this program was developed by a team of professionals that combine the most modern techniques with a wide experience in this field.

There is no prerequisite for this course, it is not necessary to have any previous knowledge about this matter as the contents of the lessons have been written in a way that is ease to understand and practice

Techniques with Facial and Foot Reflexology, and acupressure for Pets
These methodologies deal with the healing of the body by certain changes.

It is possible to

- Stimulate the nerves system
- Increase blood flow
- Avoid muscular spasms
- Cause hormonal change
- Increase endorphins (that control the pain)
- Increase cortisol (natural steroid)
- Infertility
- Skin problems
- Diabetes
- Epilepsy and many other health's problems.

By combining manual therapies with homeopathy, vitamins and minerals, diet, etc., remarkable and healthier results can be achieved quickly, obtaining a better health and life quality for the animal in a non toxic and natural way.

In this course, every student is prepared for performing professional sessions of facial and foot reflex therapy and acupressure on small animals. Also in the use of natural remedies and diet for dogs and cats and offers assessment after finishing the complete course.

Content of the course:

- Theory and practice of Facial Reflexology for dogs and cats
- Theory and practice of Foot Reflexology for dogs and cats
- Theory and practice of Facial Reflex therapy for horses
- Acupressure for dogs and cats
